

Help Out on State Natural Areas

Observatory Hill Workday

Enjoy the warm weather at Observatory Hill, one of John Muir's favorite spots. A large-scale restoration is taking place here and new gaps in the canopy have been created. Native seed has been spread but invasives like Japanese hedge parsley are threatening to take over. We will remove hedge parsley to encourage native plants to fill in the gaps. Bring a bag lunch to eat afterwards if you can stay. No skills needed you will be trained onsite.
